

Interfaith Sunday

February 28, 2016

Sunday – 11:00 am Service

Formerly called “Brotherhood Sunday,” we decided to rename this long annual tradition at our temple to sound less male-centered. The last Sunday in February is a time to hear from people of various religious faiths and share our common concerns about fostering harmony locally and globally. This year’s speaker is someone many of you already know – Rebecca John of the Japanese American Service Committee.

“Maps, Compass and Dictionary”

As the title indicates, Becky (as we know her) will share her journey of interfaith and international experiences which shaped her life. She joined the JASC staff in January 2014 as the In-Home Support Services Manager, working with a team of homemakers who help older adults with activities of daily living so that they can remain safely in their homes. Becky grew up in a Protestant Christian family, the tradition that still grounds her today, but she’s visited our temple occasionally and we’re grateful that she’s referred friends who became active members.
